Amsterdam is one of Europe's coolest cities. It's hip, trendy very open and friendly to all sorts of foreigners. It's people are famous for being inventive defending their from the water since the 17th century. The city lies below sea level and its thanks to the smart architecture and powerful engineering of the dutch that their experience hardly any floods at all.

One of Amsterdam's symbol is the bikes. There are everywhere and one has to watch out for them especially when on foot and crossing over the street and bike pathes. But its also symbolic for the reduced traffic in downtown Amsterdam. The air is clean and fresh and especially young people love to rent a party boat to cruise around the canals on a sunny day.

If you want to go for a stroll or sit in a cafe, bar or coffee shop to watch people and lay back for a while than you sould check out the Leidseplein in Amsterdam. There is lots of activity especially in the summer time and perhaps the bussiest place for drinking and perfect to start a longer night out.

Of course there is the famous Red Light District in Amsterdam, probably the best known in Europe. Very different to many places in Europe with similar purpose, the Red Light District in Amsterdam is laid out in a kind of romantic way. Small lanes, where the girls are, consistently separated by several canals east of Damrak and south of the Central Railway Station (Centraal Amsterdam). For some visitors that have been to Italy before the canals may easily remember on Venice. It's really worth it to go for a boat tour whether at day or night time.

Accommodation in Amsterdam

Amsterdam hotels are in general set to two different prices. One price from Sunday night to Thursday night and a slightly elevated price, usually 20% up, for Friday to Saturday night. Rooms and services are the same but it's more to cash up the tones of weekend citybreakers staying over the weekend for a few fun days before going back to work on Monday morning. For those of you with very low budgets, there is a very good choice of about 100 budget places to stay. In those places you usually have to share a room with other fellow travellers. If you want a vacant private room in the heart of Red Light District and Damrak to find one below £70 or £90 is already a pretty taff job. Of course there are plenty of mid priced and luxury hotels as always.

As for budget travellers in particular it is to save as much money on the hotel as possible and have more left to spend on the fun stuff. Bud
